ALL BOW DOWN TO KHAKI AND BLUE

Christmas Day in London Devoted Almost Entirely to Recognition of the Soldiers.

'NON-COMS' EVEN RECOGNIZED

Regarded as Matter Worthy of Note that They Are Seen Mingling with Officers in Cafes and Hotels.

LONDON, Dec. 25.—Christmas of 1914 will long be remembered in Great Britain as a military Christmas. Everywhere throughout the island men in khaki and in blue were the object of attention and admiration.

There was a great decrease in the customary railway crowds of civilians visiting their homes for family reunions, but almost the usual number of trains was running.

The cars were filled with soldiers and sailors taking a brief leave to visit their families and all were travelling on passes. Many thousands of volunteers from the training camps and a considerable contingent from the continent and the fleet had two or three days for a holiday at their homes, and the whole country seemed to swarm with uniforms.

Canadians Are Prominent. London particularly was full of soldiers. Conspicuous among them were several thousand Canadians from Salisbury plains. Christmas in London is Sabbath-like because all the theaters are closed and the hotels and public houses keep Sunday hours.

Family parties taking an afternoon stroll generally had a youth in khaki or blue as the central object escorted by admiring relatives. Dinner in the big hotels was notable for the presence of the military, and an unusual feature was the presence of men in non-commissioned uniforms, who have even been mingling with officers.

Loaded with Gifts. All ranks of the troops at the front and in the home camps were loaded down with presents. Princess Mary's fund for Christmas gifts amounted to nearly $100,000, while there were numerous funds for tobacco, puddings and other luxuries raised by newspapers and societies.

Even the German military prisoners and civilians in the concentration camps had Christmas trees and gifts from home and from wealthy Germans in England. The German Young Men's Christian association and the English Quakers devoted special care to the prisoners.

Hundreds of British and Belgian wounded in the hospitals were the recipients of many attentions. Three thousand Belgian refugees in the Earle Court exhibition buildings were given Christmas dinner and at night a huge Christmas tree was presented to them by Lord Salisbury. Twenty-five hundred of them in Alexandra palace had a similar celebration.

Theater Pantomimes. Tomorrow, known in England as boxing day sees the beginning of pantomimes at several large theaters. Some of the show houses are giving free matinees for soldiers and sailors.

A special committee formed to watch conditions of distress in London has reported that there is less pauperism and unemployment in the city than on any Christmas in thirty years. This is due to the large enlistment in the army, many of the workers making room for the unemployed.

Nevertheless, the general atmosphere was one of sadness rather than that of hilarity. Economy was the watchword of the day. Christmas trees come from Germany and mistletoe comes from France, hence there was a notable scarcity of both. Christmas turkeys had slightly increased in price, but fruit was cheaper than usual owing to the smaller continental demand.

King Sends Message. King George and Queen Mary sent messages and sent Christmas cards with their portraits to every soldier and sailor. Attendance at the churches was notably large. Dean Inge, at St. Paul's, spoke of the Anglo-American peace centenary. Referring to the Canadian-American boundary, he said:

"For hundred years America and Canada have been at peace. A true peace—not watching and snarling at each other like two ill-bred dogs. That is something to thank God for on Christmas day. There are millions in Europe who look to America as a land of hope and I think they are justified in doing so. One cannot spend a week in America without feeling that hope and freedom give buoyancy to life there such as we rarely see at home."

Russians Use German Tactics and Succeed in Holding Teutons

PETROGRAD (via London), Dec. 25.—Russian successes are reported officially from the battle front before Warsaw and from that around Cracow, but without materially changing the situation.

Especially vicious attacks have been made by the Germans between Pincow, forty miles northeast of Cracow, and Nowemilsko Korczyn at the junction of the Nida and Vistula rivers.

In this place the Austrians imitated the tactics of the Germans and tried to force a passage by sheer weight and numbers. They advanced repeatedly in solid formation against the Russian front in the face of a heavy artillery fire. The net result after two days' fighting—December 22 and 23—was the capture by the Russians of nearly 5,000 prisoners, including half a hundred officers and the retention by the Russians of the left bank of the Nida, where they are strongly entrenched.

To the north the Russians are holding their own and are inflicting severe punishment on the Germans. A series of energetic attacks at Dolimow, just south of Sochaczew (thirty miles from Warsaw), are reported to have been repulsed on the night of the 23d by vigorous Russian counter attacks, while forty miles further south at Anovonetz a successful crossing of the Pilica river was turned into a German reverse by savage attacks by Siberian troops, who forced the invaders back again.

The Russo-Turkish operations have been brought to a standstill by climatic conditions in Asia Minor. Here the Russian troops have been spread out covering all the roads and quartering in the villages in an immense triangle whose sides converge for seventy miles with the base on the Russo-Turkish frontier and the apex pointing toward Erzerum.

Clad in every variety of garment to warm them, including Turkish robes and wide-flowing Kurdish coats, the Russians are huddling in every shelter hut and farm house of the Armenians and packing cowsheds, stables and storehouses. Wherever possible the roofs have been cut out, so that bonfires may be safely built within. The sound of battle is rarely heard by the main body of troops, who are wintering on the way to Erzerum. Virtually the only activity is on the part of the restless Cossacks, who are forever on the move, engaging in brushes with the opposing cavalry.

desires to acknowledge the sympathy displayed by the United States and wishing to demonstrate the vitality of French industry, decides to participate in the San Francisco exposition and urges all its members to exhibit."

Gen. Bell Stops in Omaha on His Way to New Command

"I don't know how long the American troops will remain on the Mexican border," declared Brigadier General George Bell, Jr., in Omaha on his way to assume command of the Fifth brigade of the Second division of the United States army.

He explained that he was unable to discuss the European war or the Mexican situation, because of President Wilson's orders for strict neutrality and silence on the part of the nation's military officers.

Before promotion to the rank of brigadier general, General Bell was colonel of the Sixteenth infantry. He was at Vancouver barra ks when ordered to assume command of the Fifth brigade at Galveston. This brigade ordinarily has its headquarters in the army building here, although its troops are scattered over a wide territory. DENNETT DEATH MYSTERIOUS Coroner's Jury So Finds as Result of Inquest.

Witnesses Testify that Fireman's Position Under Locomotive Must Have Been Taken by Him Intentionally.

The jury empaneled by Coroner Cutler to inquire into the death of Edward Dennett, the Northwestern locomotive fireman who was crushed to death under the wheels of an engine in the Northwestern roundhouse in Council Bluffs, Tuesday night, decided that he met his death "in a mysterious manner," and that it was due to no fault or negligence of the railroad company or any of its employees.

The testimony of half a dozen witnesses was taken, but no one was able to throw any light upon the cause of the accident except George Johnson, the engineer for whom Dennett had been firing during his run from Norfolk, Neb., to Council Bluffs. Mr. Johnson's knowledge of the affair indicated that death had been premeditated and was due to mental depression, brought about by a misunderstanding with a young woman to whom Dennett had been attentive for a long time. Engineer Johnson said Dennett had told him that he had quarreled. He said the young man had been very despondent and had refused to eat any supper after he came in from his run Tuesday afternoon. Although very drowsy he had made no threat of self-destruction.

MABEL EARLE'S STORIES PRAISE MEMORY OF WRITER

Can storied urn or animated bust Back to its mansion call the fleeting breath? Can honor's voice provoke the silent dust, Or glory soothe the dull, cold car of death?

Although Miss Mabel Earle, an Omaha short story writer of renown among readers of The Forward and other church and Sunday school publications, died early in the autumn, her works continue to appear and provoke praise among her friends.

In The Forward of last Sunday the lead story was hers and bore her name. It went into thousands of Sabbath schools throughout the land and tens of thousands of hands.

Popular as she was in her literary world while she lived, Mabel Earle's popularity is being deepened, her friends declare, by her posthumous stories. And yet Miss Earle's death passed all but unnoticed, except by her most intimate personal friends, in the city in which she had lived.

General Villa, according to reports received here, addressed the business men of Guadalupe at a mass meeting regarding the loan, and told them that if the convention government did not secure funds it could not exist for another year. Mrs. Fitzsimmons Says Bob Choked Her and Pulled Her Hair

CHICAGO, Dec. 25.—Various episodes of her marital life, in which she figured as an abused person, were related yesterday by Mrs. Julia Fitzsimmons, wife of Robert Fitzsimmons, former world champion heavy-weight pugilist, in testimony in her divorce suit against the former king of the ring.

"He used to go away," said Mrs. Fitzsimmons, "and would be brought back intoxicated by some of his beautiful friends."

The day before their final separation in July, 1910, the wife said her husband kicked her as she was passing a hall door. "I had a quarrel earlier," she explained, "about his drinking and I had not been speaking to him because he refused to quit, so when I passed by the door he kicked me."

Threats to shoot her were related by the witness, who said that at various times her husband pulled her hair or grabbed her throat, and some times threw bottles at her. "I don't want any alimony," she told the court. "I always worked before we were married and have had to since. I can do it still."

Mrs. Fitzsimmons asked permission to resume her maiden name of Julia Gifford. No defense was offered and a default was entered. The court ordered the testimony written up. Before becoming Mrs. Fitzsimmons in 1908 the complainant was a professional singer.
